De Ferranti & Litho Project

Surfaceologists since 1954

In 1954, in Verona - Italy's marble heartland - Roberto and his brothers began cutting stone by hand. From that workshop grew Litho Project, now renowned for architectural stone fabrication of extraordinary precision. Four decades later, in London, De Ferranti Limited emerged as curator of rare and exquisite surfaces.

From the 1990s onwards it revived forgotten techniques - unearthed rare marbles, scagliola, opus sectile, cocciopesto - and sourced antique floors, leathers and metals for modern architecture. Today these two houses stand as one: Italian craft meets British design intelligence.

From quarry to completion - every surface tells a story.
